Volleyball eLearning

Volleyball Canada recently revised all NCCP courses to align with the Coaching Association of Canada's change in paradigm from the old "Levels" system to a "Competency-Based" system. Over 10 years have passed since the latest revision and several advancements in coach education have taken place during this time. For example, in VC's old Level 1 manual it recommends coaches can break up the skill into its component parts, then put the two together. The latest research has demonstrated this method is not nearly as effective as developing athletes using the whole skill. In addition, VC has developed a coaching methodology that aligns with the athlete's stage of skill development. New terms were introduced (Method 1,2,3 and Simulated Play) which describe the type of drill recommended for each stage. Experienced coaches would benefit from understanding these new terms from a best practice perspective but also in order to support the evaluation of new coaches.

Making Ethical Decisions

The Coaching Association of Canada (CAC) made this 60-minute online evaluation mandatory for all coaches of all sports within the next 5 years. Volleyball Canada then added this evaluation to the existing policy as it will be required anyway. The media is currently full of negative examples of coaches making unethical decisions and VC is committed to athlete safety.

Making Head Way

Athlete safety. Coaches who were previously certified in the old system were not required to complete any concussion education. Advancement in this field has expanded, and VC felt this module was critical to support the safety of athletes.
